<4> When you decide to bring fish home from the aquarium shop, you need to also provide them with a(n) 52 place to live in. With different sizes of containers to choose from, one of the most popular types is the round goldfish bowl. However, this type will be 53 on the shelf in the French aquarium market.

A leading French aquarium vendor has stopped selling round fish bowls with a space of less than 15 liters. Firstly, the small round bowl is not equipped with the filtration device, so fish can't get the fresh oxygen, which will 54 shorten the lifespan of goldfish. Secondly, goldfish are social animals. 55, they need the company of other fish around. If they live in the small round bowl alone, they are more likely to be driven mad and die quickly.

Locking fish in a small and confined area is considered animal abuse. That's why the suppliers decided to make a difference and 56 with removing the choice of small container.

V. 閱讀測驗 (2%*6=12%)

<1> In 1992, linguists raced to Turkey to make an emergency recording. They wanted to hear a man read the words on his gravestone before he died. Tevfik Enses was the only man who could read these words properly. He was the last living speaker of a language called Ubykh.

Ubykh is just one of the languages that die out every year. This happens because languages are living things. About 6,000 languages exist in the world today, the number of which, however, is getting smaller all the time due to the steady growth of bigger languages. Currently, the Celtic languages such as Irish and Welsh are nearly extinct. What's to blame? English. And in South America, Spanish and Portuguese are replacing other regional languages found there.

Linguists predict that at least half of the world's languages will become extinct in the next hundred years. The world's most dominant languages such as English, Mandarin, and Spanish are growing at an amazing speed. But is this necessarily a bad thing? Wouldn't it be better if we all spoke the same language?

The death of a language is never a good thing. Languages are not simply words which confuse people who speak different tongues. Instead, they are connected to the culture in which they are created. As different cultures experience the world in different ways, their languages reflect this. Therefore, when we lose a language, we lose that bit of knowledge that is connected to it.

Although it would be convenient to be able to express oneself anywhere in the world, it would come at a great loss. If some day we end up speaking the same language, we can be assured that a huge amount of wisdom will be lost.

67. What does the word "which" in the second paragraph refer to?

- (A) The world.
- (B) Living things.
- (C) Bigger languages.
- (D) The languages existing now.

68. Which of the following statements can best describe the author's attitude toward languages?

- (A) We shouldn't try to stop the death of a language because it is a natural process.
- (B) Speaking the same tongue helps communication, but a lot of wisdom will die with the death of minor languages.
- (C) Linguists all over the world should be respected because they help stop the death of minor languages.
- (D) To preserve different cultures around the world, we should stop speaking major languages.

69. According to this passage, which of the following statements is true?

- (A) The death of some languages is a necessary evil.
- (B) Tevfik Ensec was the greatest linguist ever lived.
- (C) Linguists try their best to record those dying languages.
- (D) The number of speaking Mandarin is increasingly smaller.

<2> Jellyfish are neither fish nor made of jelly. In fact, their bodies are made up of 95% water and 5% solid matter. They have been existing for at least half a billion years; therefore, they are older than dinosaurs. Surprisingly, they lack many organs, such as brains, hearts, or lungs. You may be curious about how they can survive without these important organs, but everything is for the best. They don't have lungs because they rely on thin skin to absorb oxygen. They don't need a heart to pump blood because they don't have any. And they don't need a brain since they have a nerve net—below their outer skin. They can respond to the changes in the environment by using signals from the nerve net.

Most jellyfish are umbrella-shaped and have tentacles. Some even have very long tentacles. However, they never get tangled up or sting themselves because the tentacles are very slippery and will only sting other creatures. Besides, most jellyfish have little or no vision, but they can detect light and ocean currents, which helps them to navigate. A few species can also recognize colors and have a 360-degree view of their environment.

Sizes can be various among Jellyfish, from 0.5 millimeters to the giant Nomura's jellyfish, which can be measured up to two meters in diameter and weigh over 200 kilograms. Though jellyfish are fascinating, they can also be risky. Some jellyfish toxins can be deadly to humans, such as the box jellyfish and the Australian Irukandji. However, deaths rarely happen according to the number of jellyfish-sting victims every year. In any case, it's better to stay out of any jellyfish you may see. You can dive into the ocean to embrace the marine world, but you had better think twice before swimming with jellyfish.

70. What does the author mean “everything is for the best” in the first paragraph?
- (A) Ocean creatures without vital organs can't live well.
  - (B) Jellyfish live just fine with what they naturally have.
  - (C) The abundant ocean species make life much easier for jellyfish.
  - (D) It's best for jellyfish to live in the ocean because it provides everything they need.
71. Which of the following statements about jellyfish stings is true?
- (A) They certainly do no harm to humans.
  - (B) A great number of people die from them every year.
  - (C) Only Nomura's jellyfish stings are big enough to be seen.
  - (D) They are rarely fatal, but people should watch out for them.
72. Which of the following features about jellyfish is NOT mentioned in the reading?
- (A) Their size.      (B) Their toxicity.      (C) Their diet.      (D) Their appearance.

The following is a letter written by Nancy, to an editor, Abby.
Dear Abby: I'm a freshman in high school. One day when walking down the hallway at school, I passed Kevin, a senior, who laughed and said, "Do it to me, baby!" I was totally shocked. Kevin is the best soccer player in my school. He's also gorgeous and very popular with most of the girls. Because he said that, I was really uncomfortable. I guess he was just making fun of me, but I still felt like a fool. I ran off without saying a word. Should I tell him how I feel next time? Nancy in Chiayi
The following is the reply from Abby.
Dear Nancy, You can definitely tell Kevin exactly how you felt. After all, if you don't, who will? Some high school boys, like Kevin, may just try things like this to get your attention. You may therefore wonder if Kevin's sexually suggestive words are just a joke or just flirting. However, in my opinion, you were verbally harassed by Kevin when he used the expression. Sexual harassment comes in many forms. It's not just a physical or sexual assault. The most common kinds of sexual harassment can be verbal, and you've just been a victim of this. However, there are specific difference between harassment and flirting that everyone should understand. Please see the attached file for more details. I thus suggest you let Kevin know that you don't like remarks of this kind, and that they are not welcome at all. If he continues to behave in this way once you've informed him, you should report it to your teachers or school officials. By the way, you can also share your experience with your parents and see if they have any further advice. Hope this helps, and thanks for your letter. Abby

Characteristics of Harassment &amp; Flirting
Harassment feels bad one-sided insulting (冒犯的) produce negative self-esteem may include negative touching	Flirting feels good reciprocal(互相的) complimentary (讚美的) produces positive self-esteem may include positive touching
. . . . . ● . . . . .

73. What is Nancy’s problem?
- (A) She would like to confess that she’s got a crush on Kevin.
  - (B) She has problems in understanding her sexual orientation.
  - (C) She doesn’t know how to handle or understand Kevin’s suggestive words.
  - (D) She is afraid of becoming isolated at school if she rejects Kevin’s request.
74. What made Abby sure that Nancy had experienced harassment instead of flirting?
- (A) Nancy was touched by Kevin in an inappropriate way.
  - (B) Nancy felt awkward and uncomfortable when she heard Kevin’s words.
  - (C) Kevin was just making fun of Nancy and wasn’t really being serious.
  - (D) Kevin teased Nancy by making inappropriate comments about her figure.
75. Which of the following is NOT one of the suggestions Abby gives Nancy?
- (A) To tell Kevin frankly how she feels.
  - (B) To share the incident with her parents.
  - (C) To ask her senior friends for help and advice.
  - (D) To report the incident to the teachers or school officials if necessary.
